All schools 1938-39	354	6	303	264.47	93.61	351	1.32	240	208

From the above table tabulation it will be noted that every school had the full number of half sessions required by law. The percent of attendance has improved, and the number of instances of tardiness has diminished. The total number of different pupils registered in the schools of the district was 297. In addition seven pupils attended schools outside. There were five tuition pupils at the high school—this makes the number of pupils residing in the district and attending public schools 299, a decrease of six from last year.

During the summer of 1940, a new General Electric Automatic oil burner and furnace were installed in the Hopkinton Village two-room school, and a suitable metal fence put along the side of the school grounds nearest the main highway. A room for the teachers was also finished in the second story of the building. We now have at a very moderate cost a two-room building with modern equipment to accommodate about 70 pupils.

Early in January, 1941, a new building 30 ft. x 40 ft. for farm shop work at the high school was started in co-operation with the National Youth Administration. The cost to the district is for site and materials only—a lot conveniently located back of the high school building was purchased from Mr. Morrill of Colebrook. This building will fill one of the long felt needs of the Agricultural classes of the high school.

On account of lack of convenient means of darkening the windows of the high school building, we have been unable to use the moving picture machine a great deal this year. Silent moving pictures are rapidly becoming obsolete and it is increasingly difficult to get good new films of this kind. It probably would be most economical to trade in the machine owned by the district for a new sound machine, while it yet has some value.

Some new apparatus for the work in Physics was purchased this year and has been very helpful in adding to the interest and practical value of the course. There is need of a complete renovation of the science laboratory and the addition of new lockers equipped with gas.

The progress made during the year, and the advancement of the pupils has been due to the cooperation of those concerned in district affairs. We thank the parents, pupils, teachers and school board for their continued support.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN A. SINCLAIR,
Superintendent of Schools.

HEADMASTER'S REPORT

The courses taught for this year by your headmaster were U. S. Constitutional History, Junior Business Training, Algebra I, and Algebra II. Algebra I was written into the program this year because of the need of a group of seniors and juniors which had decided to be prepared for college. The classes in the first two courses were over forty in size which is too big to permit the best of work. The time may soon be here when the combining of grades will prove impossible even in these courses.

The State of New Hampshire requires the teaching, and passing of, U. S. History. There is a surprising amount of pupil dislike for all history. In view of this the modern tendency to emphasize social science even in the lower grades seems entirely sound. Too much time has been spent on learning a mass of non-connected facts the mastery of which qualified one as an historical expert. Only when these facts and political items are seen in their relation to the lives, hates, and loves of a people can we hope for a more intelligent citizenry. Likewise more time must be spent on industrial and scientific history for the ability of an industry to turn out 5,000 cars a day does much to the lives of a people although they have their greatest influence only when given the opportunity to a liberal use under a political constitution guaranteeing individual freedom. An attempt has been made to teach history from this point of view. Likewise we all know that to teach U. S. History separate from world implications is a most serious error. The events of this year have brought this home to us only as hard facts can so do. We hope that the United States and its people are both better for the teaching of this course in our schools.

Junior Business Training has been taught for the benefit of all pupils based on worthwhile knowledge and not from the commercial training angle although there is enough of the latter to aid a pupil in trying to decide on a vocation. Too many pupils are apt to be guided in the selection of a vocation by some romantic book, or movie, and do not think of the hours of good, hard work which are the prelude to that position so well popularized. Perfection in human accomplishments is a hard goal and there are some positions which demand perfection. Girls considering the vocations in the business and nursing field should consider carefully the high degree of perfection which both demand.

Algebra II is taught for those people who like mathematics and who think they need it for college preparation. No attempt is made to "sugar-coat" this course and opportunity is offered, although not always taken, to stretch one's capacity and do some real work. It has been a real pleasure to me, and some hard work too, to have two pupils do more than $1\frac{1}{2}$ years work in this course. More of us should realize that courses are designed to give the essentials to the greatest number possible which a few may be able to master easily. Hence all courses should make possible a flexible assignment and thus challenge the best minds or those especially gifted in a particular field. No pupil has ever been marked down because of too much work. There is still a place in the United States for individual intellectual curiosity and it will be a sad day when it ceases to exist or when it is stifled when it does exist. Of course this is not the easiest way of teaching but there seems to be no alternative way of doing a good job of teaching. Our courses are becoming more and more applicable to daily life as commonly found. This tendency is a fine thing and will continue. Yet, the rungs of the educational ladder must reach ever higher and be never ending.

Once again in these reports your attention is called to that phase of education which develops, but in turn is dependent on, that non-intellectual quality known as character. The best mind developed to non-social and non-Christian aims may undermine an otherwise sound institution. Traits of character are always in evidence in school life. The teacher in the small school is in a position to observe these and know his pupil to a degree which can never be approached by any guidance system no matter how expertly organized or salaried. The best guidance is based on knowledge and work of the individual teacher and not on paper charts. A live teacher becomes aware of this the longer he remains in the field.

No living institution should stand still and there are several ways, some of them mentioned in past reports, in which this school could be improved. Some of them call for money when money may be at a premium for defense purposes. In the last analysis a well educated and trained citizenry is the best guarantee of a sound defense. The educational institutions of a town are one of its biggest assets.

The continued support of the many parties concerned in maintaining our high school is greatly appreciated. We hope to continue to merit this co-operation.

Respectfully submitted,

C. MAURICE GRAY,
Headmaster.

ENGLISH, FRENCH, AND LATIN

English

In all four classes the literature curriculum consisted of experiences with and through the short story, biography, novel, drama, narrative poetry, lyric poetry, and essay. The aim of the freshman and sophomore courses was to become acquainted with the various types of literature and the purposes they serve. In the junior and senior classes, literature was approached from the point of view of becoming acquainted with the authors and literary productions of the different periods of a country, America in the first case and England in the second. The correlation between literature and social, economic, and political conditions during which it was produced was stressed. A very important achievement in all classes was the enjoyment and appreciation.

The other aspects of an English course were by no means neglected. The language was spoken and written with a view to improvement and advancement. Units in various compositions, letter writing, debating, oral topics, vocabulary study, personal and written applications, punctuation, and grammar were a few of those which helped to attain these aims.

In two instances a lack of textbooks, of novels, necessitated resorting to outside resources. From a list of suggested books the pupil selected his choice and proceeded to read at his own rate. Exercises and discussions supplemented the reading. This method proved very satisfactory, for the pupils really enjoyed the books (they were not "musts" but of their own choice) and soon books were being circulated about the classroom and read by other members.

French

French was the language of the classroom as much as possible in continuing the work of the previous year. A review of grammar, vocabulary, and reading of simple French started out the work. These elements, increasing in difficulty continued to be stressed throughout the year. In addition to the short anecdotes, history selections, and short poems which are included in the French Book Two of the Language, Literature, and Life series, two novels, Sans Famille by Hector Malot and L'Abbe Constantin by Ludovic Halevy, were thoroughly enjoyed. French culture was also discussed.

Latin

As the course offered this year was Latin I, most of the time was spent in learning the fundamentals of the language. The pupils learned to pronounce correctly, read comprehensively, and convey simple thought in Latin, written as well as oral. By means of projects, outside reading, and the classwork the culture and history of Rome and the Romans were introduced.

A correlation of English derivations with Latin words proved to be interesting and valuable. In many instances English grammatical construction were clarified through the study of the Latin grammar. The text used was the Grey and Jenkins' Latin of Today.

HOME ECONOMICS

The two high school courses in Home Economics during this past year were for the Freshman and Sophomores, "Foods and Nutrition," and for the Juniors and Seniors, "The Family and Its Members."

The units in "Foods and Nutrition" were: 1. Food Preservation; 2. Kitchen Efficiency; 3. Nutrition; 4. Breakfasts; 5. Luncheons; 6. Dinners; 7. Food for Children; 8. Food for the sick; 9. Meals for Special Occasions. As far as possible, all work is based on meal preparation. Special emphasis is placed in the principles of cookery and consumer education.

In the course "The Family and Its Members", the units studied were: 1. History of the Family; 2. Family Responsibilities; 3. Community Responsibilities; 4. Home Nursing and Emergencies; 5. Feeding the Sick; 6. First Aid; 7. Infant and Child Care and Training; 8. Choice of Vocation; 9. Worthy Use of Leisure Time. This course is designed to make the girls realize their responsibility to the home and community. The girls took the National Red Cross examination in First Aid and received their certificates. Another practical project carried on by the girls was the making of simple toys and play equipment for children.

As in past years each girl completed at least 120 hours of project work at home. The purpose of these projects is to correlate the work at school with the work at home. It is through these projects that the girls have the opportunity to use the knowledge obtained in class by doing many household tasks.

The courses for the seventh and eighth grade are based on the principles of simple homemaking. Each class meets twice a week for eighty minutes at a time. Some of the units taught were grooming, mending, care of the home, meal preparation, and basic principles of sewing. A few of the articles made were holders, Christmas gift slips, aprons, blouses, shorts and skirt suits. The foods work, as in high school, is based on meal preparation.

We feel that as a result of Home Economics the girls will be worthy home members.

AGRICULTURE

A vocational agriculture department is not of maximum value to a community unless it renders community service in addition to its regular school program.

We have carried on the spraying program for four years successfully and this we consider a community service to many people who have a small number of trees.

Recently we have added a smaller hand sprayer to our equipment to meet the demand of many for whitewashing stables, poultry houses, etc. It also gives our Future Farmer Boys an opportunity to work and earn some money while performing this service outside of school.

We also test a great many samples of milk and soil during the year for people desiring this service.

Our Future Farmer organization is functioning and last year we put on a one act April fool play entitled "Finally, if not First", over station WFEA. In May we were hosts for the state convention and entertained 150 F. F. A. boys from all over the state for two days.

JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL SUBJECTS

Social Science VII.

The seventh grade Social Science class has as usual followed and completed the Rugg course for the year. This year the course was divided into two parts—1. "An Introduction to American Civilization"; 2. "Changing Civilizations in the Modern World". The latter course particularly has been stimulated by current happenings which have been interwoven into the course. We have had as our aim a broader understanding and tolerance of other peoples of the world.

English VII. and VIII.

In English eight we had a very interesting unit dealing with oral expression. This was approached from the practical point of view, trying to have each pupil realize the opportunities he may have for this type of thing. Introductions, telephone conversations, giving directions, telling of jokes, persuasive ideas, parliamentary procedure, formal speeches—these were some of the topics discussed. Each pupil gave at least one actual example of each of these. We sincerely feel that each pupil is at least a little better prepared to participate in community life because of this unit.

Literature in both grades was enjoyed by all because of our excellent text books—the "Prose and Poetry" Series.

Health VII.

The achievement test taken by the seventh grade in May, showed a rather high average in Health. This is probably due to the excellent books now in use. Stress has been laid upon the practical aspects of community health as well as the make-up of the body.

B. & C. Subjects

B. & C. period this year, aside from the regular work in Spelling and Penmanship, has been devoted to attempting to have each child become more adept in the fundamentals, particularly so in the four fundamental processes in arithmetic. We started with the basic combinations of the ten digits in the four processes, trying to have each pupil master these before he went to a more complicated step. Oral examples, combining all four fundamental processes, provided an interesting method of testing.

HELEN E. THOMAS.

SUMMARY OF YEAR'S WORK — GRADE 8

General

The nature of the work this year in Grade 8 has been focused on providing challenging work to meet the individual needs.

"Participation by all" has been a keynote to accelerate this; various class activities such as debates, interclass contests and game activities have been utilized successfully.

The pupils of Grade 8 carried on a well organized routine of class meetings which gave good practice in parliamentary procedure in addition to the engaging in of several community enterprises.

A class trip climaxed the school year.

The Junior High pupils were given the New Stanford Achievement Test to compare their work with the work of other Junior High pupils of the United States. It was gratifying to note that the class average stood high in all subjects.

Social Science 8

In accordance with the rapidly changing conditions of the world a proportionate increase in the amount of current events was provided for in Social Science classes. A weekly committee kept a bulletin board in good running order.

Any attitude of fair mindedness, an appreciation of the problems of democracy and ability to read newspapers intelligently were the main objectives of the current event period.

The Harold Rugg Series textbooks were used for the bulwark of our Social Science work.

The use of the debate enhanced our work and provided an interesting class activity.

The special report on lives of great Americans provided a challenge for rapid workers.

The state requirements were met without exception.

Algebra 8

A wide range of ability necessitated the dividing of this class into groups of varying ability. A majority of the class more than met the state requirements.

Much time was spent on the fundamentals both in the Algebra period and a special remedial period.

The equation was the center point of our work with much attention given to problems of everyday nature.

Modern-School Algebra by Schorling-Clark-Smith was the basic text.

Geometry 7

A new text Mathematics Through Experience by Georges, Anderson & Morton, written especially for the seventh grade level facilitated the work a great deal.

The pupils were given ample opportunity to express themselves both in a written and oral manner.

Much attention was given to board work and the actual drawing a geometric figures at the blackboard. All pupils both gave and received criticism from their classmates.

Science 8

A new text book series has been initiated into Grades 7 and 8, Science Problems by Beauchamp-Wayfield-West. This text has met with favorable pupil response.

Current event work was taken up with the Popular Science Monthly Magazine as a reference.

Some of the sample units taken up include the following list: Force of Gravity; Relation of Earth to Universe; Control of Heat; The Weather; Man's Use of Plants and Animals; Use of Energy; Changes of Earth's Surface; and Magnetism.

Science 7

The pupils of Grade 7 were introduced to Science by associating scientific facts with the immediate surroundings.

A study of the water faucet, how to repair a leaky faucet, and the working of the camera were steps in this direction. Other units completed included: The World We Live in; Three Types of Matter; How Heating and Cooling Changes Materials; Chemical and Physical Changes; The Work of Magnets; Use and Control of Fire; and How Plants and Animals Live.

Health 8

Several units in Health and the Human Body by Newmayer and Broorne's were completed. The main part of this course, however, was in the discussing the hazards which exist in school and community and the means of minimizing them.

With New Hampshire fast becoming the leading resort state, I believe, and increasingly so, that the people of the state should be prepared to meet the problems so presented. In view of this fact vacation dangers were summarized and discussed.

Several pupils demonstrations of prone pressure method of artificial respiration were carried out.

Physical Education

Our school has carried forth a well rounded program of physical education. The value of physical education is somewhat minimized in small high schools because of the lack of proper facilities. It is hoped that the condition will soon be relieved.

For the boys a fall schedule of touch football was*carried out in the Central New Hampshire League in which the boys won the championship without a defeat.

A trip to the state tournament at Durham climaxed the winter basketball schedule.

The Junior High School enjoyed many interclass games of basketball. A few outside games were played.

At the date of this writing a Junior High basketball team had been organized with one game played and several pending.

The annual Junior High Field Day was again organized and the pupils after practicing the events for several weeks enjoyed the wholesome competition which included games as well as athletic contests.
